Fair shows off tools of the safety trade

Post staff report

Children have a four-hour opportunity today in Florence to see, touch and hear all the "really cool stuff" police and other emergency responders use to keep the community safe.

The Safety Day Fair runs from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Home Depot store on Spiral Avenue, which is sponsoring the event with Florence police.

Families can get an up-close view of the University Hospital AirCare helicopter as well as an assortment of other emergency equipment and personnel from the Boone County Water Rescue Team, Florence Fire and Emergency Medical Services, and -- from the Florence police -- the K-9 Unit, Bike Patrol Unit and SWAT team.

The fair is designed to teach the community about local public safety organizations as well as actions individuals can take to protect themselves and their property from crime and injury.
